

Coming
Soon

Financial Times Historical Archive

1888 - 2006

The world's business newspaper: now online

The Financial Times Historical Archive is an indispensable tool for anyone interested in or studying global trade and finance, politics and business studies

With an undisputed global reputation and more full-time foreign correspondents than any other European newspaper, the FT has access to the world's most influential people and decision-makers, meaning that it can be relied upon to provide first-hand, accurate and unbiased news coverage. With over 660,000 pages the Financial Times Historical Archive is an essential primary source covering the height of the Victorian era to the recent years of the 21st century.

Key features of the Financial Times Historical Archive:

- Distinctive global recognition
- Cover to cover from 1888 to 2006
- Providing extensive news, comment and analysis
- The Lex column provides a sharp and authoritative voice on corporate and financial matters
- Includes all classified and display advertising
- Approximately 660,000 fully-searchable pages
- Every item is subject or topic categorised
- Coming soon: cross-searchable with The Times and The Economist

"The FT has been uncompromising in its core mission, which is to give readers a service which is poised, informed, classy and intelligent" - Comment from the judges following the FT winning the coveted Newspaper of the Year award at the British Press Awards in 2008

"The only paper that tells the truth" - Noam Chomsky, 1992

[www.gale.cengage.co.uk/
financial_times_historical_archive](http://www.gale.cengage.co.uk/financial_times_historical_archive)

Coming
Soon

Financial Times Historical Archive

1888 - 2006

The world's business newspaper: now online

From its beginning as the London Financial Guide in January 1888, the Financial Times has developed to become one of the best-known and most-respected newspapers in the world, with a wider readership internationally than within the UK.

This complete online fully-searchable facsimile edition of the FT offers the complete run of the London edition of the paper, from its first issue to the end of 2006. Every individual article, advertisement and market listing is included and shown individually and in the context of the full page and issue of the day. For this online archive every item has been subject or topic categorised to permit fast retrieval and review of relevant articles.

Founded even as the industrial might of imperial Britain was being challenged, the FT has developed dramatically since 1945.

Beyond domestic financial news, coverage has expanded to meet the need for reporting and analysis of the progressive globalisation of financial markets, and the demand for unbiased accurate coverage of subjects of interest to business leaders in many professions.

Objective, accurate and full coverage of:

- Companies: Business, Industry & Finance
- Globalisation
- Management
- National & International Politics
- Business Education
- Entrepreneurship
- Personal Finance
- Technology
- Arts & Leisure
- Special Surveys

The Financial Times Historical Archive is an indispensable tool for anyone interested in or studying global trade and finance, politics and business studies.

For more information please contact us:

Tel: +44 (0)1264 332424
Email: emea.enquiries@cengage.com
Visit: [www.gale.cengage.co.uk/
financial_times_historical_archive](http://www.gale.cengage.co.uk/financial_times_historical_archive)

We live in FINANCIAL TIMES®

As to bad language nothing was calculated to make a man use it more than to find his wife running away with an Irish labourer, to whom he had been paying 15s weekly.

Not just financial news. An extract from January 9, 1888 under the heading of "A Curious Case"

